STUDENT SUPERVISION since 2008

Student training has increased significantly and is outstanding after an initial growth period that naturally occurs for faculty making the transition from industry to academia. I had the privilege to supervise a large number of outstanding HQPs: Research Associates, Masters, PhDs and PDFs and undergraduates. In addition to research and technology skills, students in my Lab are encouraged and enabled to acquire professional and communication skills, and to understand the social and environment implications of their work. Their individual research projects are always part of larger projects, under the umbrella of national or provincial research networks such as NSERC-SNG:SAVI, ORF-RE: CVST or BRAIN, CREATE: DITA Collectively, the HQ graduate students and PDFs have co-authored 91 journal papers, refereed conference papers and book chapters, presented at and travelled to more than 30 international conferences, and contributed to the review process and organization of dozens of international conferences.

Post-doctoral fellows (11). PDFs have spent two years, in average, in my Lab. They improved their research proficiencies and output, expanded their professional network and acquired mentorship and leadership talents. Consequently, they secured faculty positions (Hamzeh Khazaei-Univ. of Alberta, Marios Fokaefs- Ecole Polytechnique, Mike Smit-Dalhousie Univ., Mark Shtern, Cornel Barna-Seneca), or jobs with high tech industry (Brad Simmons – SkyTree, Rizwan Mian- Hortonworks).

Master's and PhDs (22 and 8). All graduate students under my supervision got direct exposure to industry relevant research problems and many had industrial internships (Ghanbari, Barna, Beigi, Theodorou, Lu). They all wrote outstanding papers and theses. Hamoun Ghanbari (PhD 2014) thesis “Model-Based Dynamic Resource Management for Service Oriented Clouds” features many outstanding contributions to self-adaptive systems and cloud computing. He has published over 20 refereed publications and his h-index was 9 when he graduated. He is now at Scientist at Amazon, where he continues his research on cloud elasticity. Cornel Barna (PhD 2015) wrote a thesis on “Engineering Model Based Adaptive Software Systems” and published 15 papers during his studies and received many awards including a Best Paper Award. Many Master's theses were shaped by the NSERC Strategic Network, SAVI or the ORF-RE network BRAIN: adaptive requirements (Veleda, Zoghi), VMs migration in clouds(Lu), elastic big data infrastructures (Zareian, Sandel), cloud elasticity (Gergin, Theodorou). All Master's found jobs in their area of research with IT companies (IBM, Hwawei, Terapeak).

Undergraduate Students (15). Fifteen undergraduate students have undertaken research under my supervision. Six of them have been formally enrolled in an Undergraduate Research Project. Others have been involved as part summer research interns, integrated into my graduate research team and have completed research work on software modeling, distributed computing, adaptive computing, and cloud computing. They work with the networking and computing equipment available within my research laboratory. Many students who did their undergraduate projects under my supervision received their first jobs based on the sound engineering experience they gained while working in my research lab. Others have become Masters students under my supervision or in reputable US universities.

Research Associates (6). I supervised six research associates. They have worked on research oriented towards commercialization and funded through NSERC I2I programs. Their work was on big data, cloud computing, software engineering. Those who finished found highly qualified jobs in high tech companies.

MOST IMPORTANT RESEARCH CONTRIBUTIONS (LAST 6 YEARS) AND EVIDENCE OF IMPACT

Synopsis

In the last six years, my research has made an impact on both industry and academia. In industry, my research has yielded five patents filed with industrial partners, technology transfer that has been incorporated into an industrial product, “IBM Smart Cloud Provisioning,” and the creation of a start-up company, Bitnobi Inc. My research and my HQPs are in high demand in industry and many of the research outcomes are the result of collaboration with industrial partners. In academia, I am an internationally recognized leader in self-adaptive research for software engineering and the co-founder of Software Engineering for Adaptive and Self-Managing Systems (SEAMS) flagship conference. I have been the Chair of the Steering Committee of SEAMS (2014-2017), the General Chair (209, 2013) and PC Chair (2011). In the last six years, I co-authored 93 refereed publications. Most notably, the papers won: CASCON Best Paper Award (2016), ICST Best Paper Award (2016), CASCON Most Influential Paper Award (2015), 2nd and 3rd Places at the IEEE Service Cup (2013), 3rd Place at the IEEE Services Cup (2012). Since joining Academia, in 2008, my h-index has reached 32, with over 4900 citations.

The most important contributions to research in the last six years are highlighted below.

1. Software Engineering for Self-Adaptive Systems.

My contributions in this emerging research area consist of design patterns and frameworks for self-adaptive systems, control theory based adaptive software and network aware adaptive systems. In “Designing Adaptive Applications Deployed on Cloud Environments” we present a systematic methodology for designing adaptive applications deployed in cloud environments. The proposed methodology consists of several phases that take high-level stakeholders’ adaptation goals and transform them into lower-level MAPE-K loop control points. The MAPE-K loops are then activated at runtime using search-based algorithms. Our methodology includes the elicitation, ranking, and evaluation of control points, all meant to enable a runtime search-based adaptation. The model-identification adaptive control for software systems, developed initially for adaptive performance management, has been extended to adaptive testing and to denial of service attack mitigation and has been picked up by many researchers. As a recognized leader in the field, I have been invited to write or co-author chapters in several influential research books. This work has resulted in three patents, filed with industrial partners, and has been integrated into “IBM Tivoli Intelligent Orchestrator” product. It also contributed to two highly cited road map papers for self-adaptive systems (over 2,000 Google citations as of Oct 1, 2020).

2. Performance Modeling, Optimization and Testing.

Contributions in this area consist of new methods for analysis and design of distributed software modules faced with multiple classes of users and many workload mixes and new runtime performance management frameworks. In “A Performance Evaluation Framework for Web Applications” we model the software system using a two-layer queuing model and use analytical techniques to find the workload mixes that change the bottlenecks in the system. This method has direct applications to performance testing. In “Autonomic Load-Testing Framework” we present a method that models the system under test, uses the model to find the software and hardware bottlenecks, and generate the workloads that saturate them. The model and workloads are determined during the performance test execution by measuring the system performance, fitting a performance model and by analytically computing the number and mix of users that will saturate the bottlenecks. Under non-asymptotic loads, worst-case metrics are computed using heuristic algorithms derived from exact asymptotic methods. This work has resulted in a patent, a stand-alone product,

Opera, and a Best Paper Award (2016) at the International Conference on Software Testing.

3. Runtime self-tuning models and estimators.

We have developed and perfected new estimation/filtering techniques that, at runtime, adapt a software performance model. An estimator tracks the system at runtime by measuring a small number of performance metrics; by using modified control estimators, like Bayesian or particle filters, non-measurable or noisy parameters are estimated such that the model has an accurate representation of the system. In “Integrated Estimation and Tracking of Performance Model Parameters with Autoregressive Trends” we present an autoregressive model for trend prediction that is integrated with a parameter estimator, in a single Kalman Filter, using auxiliary states for the parameter evolution process. The paper describes how the trend model is constructed, and evaluates its effectiveness. This work has resulted in a patent and contributed to a highly cited road map paper for self-adaptive systems (407 Google citations in two years, as of May 1, 2017). The work in runtime model estimators was recognized with the Most Influential Paper Award (CASCON 2015).

4. Cloud and Big Data – Elasticity and Privacy.

In cloud computing, the contributions include models and controllers for elasticity, services and optimization algorithms for performance and cost, availability and privacy management.

4.1 Cloud Elasticity

In “Economics-Driven Resource Scalability on the Cloud,” we recognize the business ecosystem of cloud computing as an economy of scale and explore the effect of this fact on decisions concerning scaling the infrastructure of web applications to account for fluctuations in demand. The goal is to reveal and formalize opportunities for economically optimal scaling decisions that take into account not only the cost of infrastructure, but also the revenue from service delivery and eventually the profit of the service provider. Being a recognized expert in the elasticity management, I have been invited to contribute a chapter for “Cloud Services, Networking and Management” book. A web service for the cloud metadata won the 3rd place in IEEE Services cup 2012 and two other papers and services won 2nd and 3rd Places at the IEEE Service Cup (2013), the first place being awarded to Fujitsu Research. The work also won an industrial award (“IBM CAS Project of the Year”) and led to features in an industrial product (“IBM Smart Cloud Provisioning”).

4.2 Big Data Design and Privacy

In data intensive applications, the design of schema, the distribution of data on cloud VMs or containers, the size of the number of those VMs or containers are design choices of the software architect. The applicant developed the foundation for design and for data streaming and validated them on several application domains, including smart buildings and smart transportation. We contribute a data sharing and segmentation mechanism, with access control, anonymization and auto scaling. The work led to two patents and a start-up company, Bitnobi Inc.

The Nature of Collaborations with Other Researchers

I collaborate mainly with my Master and PhD students, Post-Doctoral Fellows and Research Associates. When publications are with students, their names appear first, ordered by seniority, with the most senior last. Second, I collaborate with industrial partners, namely IBM, CA, Juniper. I have a special collaboration history with IBM Centre for Advanced Studies(CAS), since it has been a model of collaboration industry-academia.

We just published a book "Collaboration and Innovation: Honouring 25 Years of IBM CAS and CASCON" that captures researcher and practitioner stories of how CAS/CASCON have impacted research, innovation, and technology exchange in Canada over the past 25 years. In 2017, IBM CAS received the IEEE CS TCSE Synergy Award for its collaboration model. The award acknowledges the above book as a chronicle of the lasting impact of CAS ecosystem. I also collaborate with world leaders in software engineering and adaptive systems. In general, we use Shonan and Dagstuhl seminars as collaboration places and the outcomes include books or joint papers that have been influential in our field. In this case, the authors appear in alphabetical order and the contribution is even.

The Nature of Conferences

Since my research is at the intersection of software engineering, adaptive systems, cloud and software management, I choose to publish in first tier topical conferences in these areas: software engineering (ACM/IEEE ICSE), adaptive systems (ACM/IEEE SEAMS), autonomic systems (IEEE ICAC), performance engineering (IEEE ICPE), system management (IFIP/IEEE CNSM, IFIP/IEEE IM), and cloud computing (IEEE Cloud). I also publish in top tier journals on the above topics, IEEE Tr. on Cloud, IEEE Tr. on Distr. Systems, ACM Tr. On Autonomous and Adaptive Systems.

I am a proponent of bringing people together in conferences to generate synergy. I am a cofounder of the ACM/IEEE International Symposium on Software Engineering for Self-Adaptive and Self-Managing Systems (SEAMS) and I will be the General Chair for SEAMS 2019. I co-initiated a new workshop, Models at Runtime & Networked Control for Cyber Physical Systems, Reston, VA, December, 2016, and NII Shonan Seminar on Software Engineering and Networked Control for Smart Cyber Physical Systems (SENCPS), Shonan, Japan, August 2017.

IMPACT ON SOFTWARE ENGINEERING PRACTICE

I believe in using industrial use cases and frameworks to validate my research at scale. I also consider that we have a responsibility to contribute to the economic cycle by helping companies innovate and generate jobs in Canada and therefore generating more research funds. By products of my research include open source software, open frameworks, patents and technology transfer. The impact is visible through

- eight awarded patents filed with IBM. Those patents have improved IBM software development tools, autonomic management platforms and IBM computing initiative.
- many awards recognizing the impact on IBM products and people such as:
 - IBM Outstanding Technical Achievement Award
 - IBM Project of the Year Award
 - NSERC Synergy Award for Innovation, Leo Derikx Award (for CAS team and 12 partner universities)
 - IBM Faculty of the Year Award

- The founding of a company, Bitnobi Inc. (<http://bitnobi.com>). Based on technology transfer and three patents created in Litoiu Lab., Bitnobi is a fast growing standalone company, with a flagship product, bitnobi, for data sharing and data access control. Bitnobi was awarded the “Top security innovators award” in 2019 and has the Department and National Defense and La Roche corporation among its customers.
 - Leadership roles in industry and academic-industrial consortiums
 - Chair of the Board for Consortium for Software Engineering Research in Canada
 - Director of the Centre for Research in Adaptive Systems (CERAS)
